The Central Highlands Tourist Railway

The Central Highlands Tourist Railway is a non-profit volunteer organisation. Formed in 1981 its purpose is to operate a heritage railway on a portion of the former Daylesford to Carlsruhe branchline. It does so under the trading name Daylesford Spa Country Railway.

Over the past 20 odd years The CHTR has restored the line between Daylesford and our terminus at Bullarto to an operational status. Except for a short distance past Bullarto and the yard at Trentham the remainder of the line was dismantled in 1988.

The CHTR is unique amongst rail preservation groups in that we have focused on preserving and operating railmotors of the Victorian Railways.

These units were the backbone of rail passenger service in rural Victoria from the early 1920s until the removal of all such branch line services in the 1970s.

Three fully restored railmotors operate regular services between Daylesford and Bullarto every Sunday of the year except Christmas Day.
